VII. Community Building Activities

Economic development. Jefferson Community Health Center is active in local economic development activities. JCHC is a member of the Fairbury Chamber of Commerce. We seek opportunities to offer tours, health care information on community websites, etc. Cost of chamber membership: $275.

In addition to these direct programs and services, the employees of Jefferson Community Health Center serve their community in many ways including serving in their churches, as Girl and Boy Scout leaders, 4-H leaders, as leaders in civic organizations, as youth group leaders, as city government members, on community development boards, for emergency response organizations, and others. JCHC staff members are a resource as community role models.

JCHC is proud of its contributions to the citizens of Jefferson County and the surrounding area. The citizens of this area also highly regard JCHC's contributions to the community.

The goal of the JCHC board of directors, administration and staff is to expand that partnership with area residents and find more ways to serve as a resource for health and wellness information.
